

wordlessness and the woods

I do not speak for conquest:
today, again, I am unarmed –
eyes trained on the Pacific.
I am not here to demystify this encounter.
Signposts hung on air
direct breath among breath.
I will take the wind home with me,
hold it beneath my tongue.

Published in Going Down Swinging (2011) 32, p. 62